game, while Cornell has gotten a mark of six for its four contests.

Oddly enough, Postoffice, which lost games to both Cornell and Pepco, turned out to be the team which threw Pepco out of its stride. The Mailmen, with Ferguson in the box, got the better of the Independence League winners just when a tie with Cornell for the honor seemed assured. Cornell by no means has the title cinched, since a loss to either Postoffice or the Bankers in the two games yet to be played may force a tie with Pepco.

The Cornell team will probably face this Feinle, the Bankers' star pitcher. In one game, and Walter Ferguson in the other, and the results of the two conests are by no means certain for Cornell. Both of those games should draw benner crowds as each town has However, by sticking to it, the Beaneaters slammed out enough runs to land the honors in the eighth inning.

JOHN MAHONEY

Retire.

State boxing commission barred Jack Johnson from appearing in this State "for the good of the game," It is known that the real reason is hostility toward the champion for his shabby treatment of Sam Fitzpatrick, who collected mone, for the trip to Australia by Johnson ending with his defeat of Tommy Burns and gaining the title. When the boxing bill became a law here, Senator Fraw ley then said that Johnson could never be allowed to appear in a ring in this State, and he has kept his word. Fitzpatrick took Johnson to England France, and Australia, trailing Tomm; Burns, then champion, and finally cor nered him in the Antipodes. He trained Johnson for his tattle that gave him the title. When it came to sharing the winnings, Johnson turned down Fitzpatrick cold. Sam has many friends here, and they have been leaders of the movement to bar the champlen from the State. It is believed that Johnson will really retire, tiduking himself past the age when he can train and reach his true form for a hard mill. Advices from Chicago say that he realized in his battle with Flynn that he was "done" in the ring, and that he cannot be coaxed into a battle in defense of his title against a strong challenger.

Cannot Explain Why He Is So Successful With the Bat.

Wood vs. Marquard Would Be Battle Worth Seeing

When the world's series gets under way, the announcer, who may be our own "Bugle" Phillips, will very likely shout that the batteries will be Wood and Cady for the Red Sox, and Marquard and Meyers for the Giants. With these two twirlers in top form, their combat should be worth all the worry of getting tickets to BOSTON, Aug. 25.—"Really I couldn't tell you how I hit. I just hit 'em,

It was Speaker speaking-the famous Tris' Speaker, the man who is the 'Boss" in Boston and trips up pitchers and cuts up so with the bat.

It was not modesty, nor any affected statement on his part-but the exact truth. Speaker, though hels as fluent as his name suggests, could no more tell you how he hits 'em than an armless man can shake dice.

For he is the healthlest specimen of the natural hitter yet discovered. He is a natural fellow, too-looks natural, talks, eats, and sleeps just as natural as can be. And when he gets up there with that war club-sa-ay! he is just naturally the limit, that's all. Well, that settled it. If Speaker didn't know how to hit, who else did? didn't know how to hit, who else did?

I give up. I felt a little struck out at not being able to learn a thing about the most interesting part of him, but I didn't rush away; maybe could tell me something else about himself. And he did.
Hubbard, a little city town in Texas, is where Tris resides when he is home.
He decided on that place back in 1888, I am not sure whether, that is the reason Texas is called the "Lone Star" State or not—but it would seem only

State or not-but it would seem only natural that they should at the present

Just Naturally Grew Up. Anyway, Speaker just naturally grew up down thre in that large, airy place, among the steers and sand lots. His boyhood was filled with green apples, spankings, and ambitions. Ambition the same that fills 5,000.000 other little boyhoods in the United States-the ambition to become a great ball play-er and a great pitcher.

So 'little Tris started early—"The sooner the quicker," he argued—and sooner the quicker," he argued—and devoted all his spare time, and lots of other time that was not to spare, to playing ball. He would rather play ball than eat—and generally did. But little Tris had work to do, school to attend, and other duties that life in Texas required of him. This all grated on his ambition—it took his time and his thoughts from the game—and anyway, doing chores and such about the ranch was small time stuff for a ball player. It's funny why parents never seem to understand genius. Speaker's couldn't. They could see little Tris' hopes with a telescope. It was different with our hero, though; he had a foresight like a searchlight, and even at the early age of ten he could see himself the peer of baseballers, the idol of thousands and 'er—the owner of an automobile.

So in time it was an easy matter for So in time it was an easy matter for Cleburne, in the North Texas League, to put him on the payroll as one of their pitchers.

Didn't Last Long.

Speaker did not last long with Cleburne, and he lasted even a shorter time as a pitcher, for when Tris once got that "natural swing" to workingwhy he just naturally batted himself out of the pitcher's box and out of the North Texas League into a better job

North Texas League into a better job as a fielder with Houston.

During 1907 Triphammer Tris just naturally ruined all the fences in the circuit, and at the end of the season was leading the Hitter's Grand March so far that he never came back.

"I always could hit," was the only comment on his batting, while I wondered if it wasn't a good thing that Texas is such a large State, and if it was not for the muchness of it what a bother it would have been to get extradition papers for the recovery of all the baseballs.

a bother it would have been to get extradition papers for the recovery of all the baseballs.

Well, when the American League convention met in the spring, Tris on account of his wonderful influence with a bat, was chosen as a delegate by the Boston Red Sox. Speaker must have been one of those uninstructed delegates we have been reading about, for Boston sent him down to Little Rock for a little more instruction. He must have learned fast, for he was soon promoted back to the Red Sox, and is now the most learned man on the Boston team—and, it's quite a cultured team, too, by the way.

Speaker is still quite young—only twenty-four—and as his apprenticeship in the bushes was very short, he still retains that youthful interest and enthusiasm that is so valuable and delightful in a player. "It's a pleasure not a business," he puts it.
